

About this resource

This exercise focuses on being more specific and considering the direction of the question. This develops discipline in addressing the question not the subject of the question.

Have learners pair up and stand either side of a line one must agree, and one must disagree. Make it 'parliamentary' by having a sword's length between the two groups. Some learners may need the verb defined to ensure they answer the question directly.

Sassy Semantics

Model the answer with:

Yes and I think this because...

or

No, I do not agree with this because...

- Can you be happy if you are poor?
- Should you be happy if you are rich?
- Can you deserve to be poor?
- Can you deserve to be rich?
- Would you have more friends if you were rich?
- Who is greedier rich or poor people?
- Can you be rich and poor at the same time?
- Is hope good or evil?
- Is it ALWAYS good to follow your dreams?
